

Race and Gender

Race and gender issues are deeply personalized; they are also distractions from the critical issues: overpopulation and tax law. When the media focuses debate the purpose is to divide working people from our common agenda.

The rich know the ponzi scheme they are floating depends on overpopulation; a ponzi always needs new players, and tax law is the tool they use to keep the hustle going. Masses of people are needed to drive down wages and perpetuate a permanent gig economy without benefits or job security. Racism and Gender the slight of hand.

If a transgender black soul became our next leader what would change? Attempt substantive change and a MLK or JFK style bullet will find your head. Wars still fought by the poor, banks would still charge interest for money they fabricate and the surplus of production goes to the rich.

Clown caricatures selling hope are allowed by the corporate media in the same way victims of oppression porn are showcased. Your 15 minutes on the podium of injustice is shameful not for your suffering but rather your complicity in the scandal of distraction.

The relationship is between money and power, a message that only a few scholars will teach, search them out.

The role of the advertising driven corporate media is to pit us against one another so we waste energy defending our victimhood. There is an alternative to your narcissism

Build coalitions that focus on tax reform and over population, educate, organize, embracing critical issues and focus the process of government on substantive reform. It does not matter if people are ready for change or want it. Organize!
